Using a little energy and keeping your eyes open can result in some big savings whenever you need to purchase ink for your printer, whether it's an inkjet, a laser or other popular model. Do some research before purchasing from a new site or store. Read the reviews and ask others who have used their products about their experiences.Shopping OnlineAmazon is one place online that carries several brands of ink cartridges. Amazon has HP compatible ink cartridges and Canon computer ink cartridges, as well as other popular brands. Ink cartridges are one of those products that are most often purchased without the option of being able to return them once you pay for them. Because of this, make very sure you are getting the right product for your printer and inquire or read about any warranty information. Some stores and sites will take returns as long as the package with the cartridges are unopened.Shopping at Outlet StoresBuying in bulk can mean a big money savings, and some of the bigger office supply stores and warehouse discount stores sell the cartridges in packs of multiples of three, five or more that break out into a savings off each cartridge. Depending on how much you use your printer, this may be another option to consider.DiscountsEven though you're looking for a good deal, keep your printer brand in mind when shopping for ink and make sure that you shop with reputable companies that sell products that you're sure will work with the model of the printer that you own.Buyer BewareEven though you're looking for a bargain remember not all deals really save you money if the product is less than what is promised. Unfortunately, it may be a lesson that you have to learn after being burned. A bad purchase once will have you looking elsewhere next time. Once you find a vendor you can trust, look for future sales and coupons or other reward methods from the store, and put all of your resources together to make your wisest purchase on ink MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET Getting started as a freelance illustrator is tough, and when Liz Clements first graduated from Falmouth she only had enough work coming in to illustrate part-time. However, thanks to social media word about her line-based style has spread and her career is taking off. She's built up a broader client base and has been signed by the agency Illustration Ltd.Commissioned by Fused magazine One of her main inspirations is tattoo art. "People use tattoos to convey messages and tell stories which I find really interesting and that is what I try to do with my work," she says. "Tattoo culture has become much more accessible in recent years due to programs like LA Ink, and I think this could be part of the reason why my work has been getting a good response."You can certainly detect an 'ink' aesthetic in her work but that's not all there is to it. As a fashion illustrator she's constantly buying rag mags, tearing out pages, and keeping the images she likes in a box for future reference. She loves drawing faces and her portfolio is full of portraiture as well.Vintage feel"My images are drawn in pencil then scanned into Photoshop to add colour. I try use the palette as a way of giving the images a vintage feel - Photoshop is a brilliant program for this. I have experimented with different ways of adding colour but I always end up going back to it," she explains.Recent clients have included the magazines Area, Kerrang and Fused, as well as electronics firm Samsung. She also sells prints on her site. And her ideal commission would be? A Vogue cover. of course.Liz Clements' work area Show details ORDERS OVER $95.00Continental USA only - Alaska , Hawaii , Puerto Rico and US Territories are not eligible for free shipping - SHIPPING POLICYWe Ship Worldwide !Customer Service available from 10AM - 5PM Mon - Fri Eastern Atlantic Time Phone: 855-ink4cake Need immediate assistance?
